Grant Expectations

Engage in a Collaborative Planning Process with County Leadership

- Targeted analysis of baseline data
- Review of existing community resources
- Identification and initial implementation of policy and practice changes

Grant Expectations

Demonstrate a Commitment to a Systems-Level Reduction in the Prevalence of MI in Jail

- A county system analysis
- Screening and assessment in the jail
  - Clinical
  - Risk
- Effective data management and information sharing
- Shared definitions and language across BH and CJ systems

Grant Expectations

Establish a Planning Team

All grantees must establish a team (or utilize a pre-existing team) of county leaders, stakeholders, and decision makers from multiple agencies to engage in the planning process.

Grant Expectations

Work with CSG Justice Center to Receive Technical Assistance

Your designated JMHCP Technical Assistance Lead will provide and coordinate support in several areas, including:

- Completion of the P&I Guide
- Identifying measures and strategies to track progress
- Content and facilitation support
- Sharing successes with stakeholders, the field, and the press

Other Requirements and Special Conditions

Complete and submit the Planning and Implementation Guide

- Grantees will receive intensive technical assistance and will have access to up to $100,000 of the total grant award in order to complete and submit a required Planning and Implementation Guide. Program budget approval and coordination with a technical assistance coordinator is required to complete and submit a Planning and Implementation Guide.

Planning & Implementation Guide

Justice and Mental Health Collaboration Program

Category 1: Collaborative County Approaches to Reducing the Prevalence of Individuals with Mental Disorders in Jail

DESCRIPTION

This Planning & Implementation Guide is intended for recipients of Justice and Mental Health Collaboration Program (JMHCPC) grants administered by the U.S. Department of Justice's Bureau of Justice Assistance. JMHCPC grantees will complete this guide in partnership with a technical assistance provider from The Council of State Governments Justice Center.

The Council of State Governments Justice Center prepared this guide with support from the U.S. Department of Justice's Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA). The contents of this document do not necessarily reflect the official position or policies of the U.S. Department of Justice.

A grant requirement, but also a useful tool for planning purposes

How Is the P&I Guide Used?

- Provides exercises that guide the county on how to develop a plan to reduce the number of people with mental illnesses in jail
- Identify things grantees are doing well
- Provide guidance on challenges or areas the grantee is working on
- Helps the TA provider target assistance
- Aids the grantee in focusing on areas of need
- Creates opportunities for peer to peer learning
- Enables ideas and best practices to be exchanged

Reducing the Number of People with Mental Illnesses in Jail

Six Questions County Leaders Need to Ask

Riad Haneberg, Dr. Tony Fabelo, Dr. Fred Osher, and Michael Thompson

Introduction

Not long ago the observation that the Los Angeles County jail serves more people with mental illnesses than any single mental health facility in the United States elicited gasps among elected officials. Today, most county leaders are quick to point out that the large number of people with mental illnesses in their jails is nothing short of a public health crisis, and doing something about it is a top priority.

Over the past decade, police, judges, corrections administrators, public defenders, prosecutors, community-based service providers, and advocates have mobilized to better respond to people with mental illnesses. Most large urban counties, and many smaller counties, have created specialized police response programs, established programs to divert people with mental illnesses charged with low-level crimes from the justice system, launched specialized courts to meet the unique needs of defendants with mental illnesses, and embedded mental health professionals in the jail to improve the likelihood that people with mental illnesses are connected to community-based services.

Despite these tremendous efforts, the problems persist. By some measures, it is more acute today than it was ten years ago, as counties report a greater number of people with mental illnesses in local jails than ever before. Why?

After reviewing a growing body of research about the characteristics of people with mental illnesses who are in contact with local criminal justice systems, analyzing millions of individual arrest, jail, and behavioral health records in a cross-section of counties across the United States, examining initiatives designed to improve outcomes for this population, and meeting with countless people who work in local justice and behavioral health systems, as well as people with mental illnesses and their families, the authors of this brief offer four reasons why efforts to date have not had the impact counties are desperate to see.

There are insufficient data to identify the target population and to inform efforts to develop a system-wide response. New initiatives are frequently designed and launched after considerable discussion but without sufficient local data. Data that establish a baseline in a jurisdiction—such as the number of people with mental illnesses currently booked into jail and their length of stay once incarcerated, their connection to treatment, and their rate of recidivism—informs a plan's design and maximizes its impact. Furthermore, eligibility criteria are frequently established for diversion programs without the data that would show how many people actually meet these criteria. As a result, county leaders subsequently find themselves disappointed by the impact of their initiative. Counties that recognize the importance of using data to plan their effort often find the data they need do not exist. It is rare to find a county that effectively and systematically collects information about the mental health and substance use treatment needs of each person booked into the jail, and records this information so it can be analyzed at a system level.

Program design and implementation is not evidence based. Research that is emerging on the subject of people with mental illnesses in the justice system demonstrates that it is not just a person's untreated mental illness but also co-occurring substance use disorders and criminogenic risk factors that contribute to his or her involvement in the justice system. Programs that treat only a person's mental illness and/or substance use disorder but do not address other factors that contribute to the likelihood of a person reoffending are unlikely to have much of an impact. Further, intensive supervision and limited treatment resources are often not targeted to the people who will benefit most from them, and community-based behavioral health care providers are rarely familiar with (or skilled in delivering) the approaches that need to be integrated into their treatment models to reduce the likelihood of someone reoffending.

1

Is our leadership committed?

2

Do we conduct timely screening and assessments?

3

Do we have baseline data?

4

Have we conducted a comprehensive process analysis & inventory of services?

5

Have we prioritized policy, practice, and funding improvements?

6

Do we track progress?

THE STEPPINGUP INITIATIVE

Systems-Level, Data-Driven Changes Should Focus on Four Key Measures

1. Reduce the number of people who have mental illnesses booked into jails

2. Shorten the length of stay in jails for people who have mental illnesses

3. Increase connection to treatment for people who have mental illnesses

4. Reduce recidivism rates for people who have mental illnesses

Additional Guides to Implement the Six Questions Framework

Project Coordinator's Handbook

Reducing the Number of People with Mental Illnesses in Jail: Six Questions County Leaders Need to Ask The Project Coordinator's Handbook

Choosing a Stepping Up Project Coordinator

Determining who will serve as the project coordinator is the first step for a jurisdiction in the Stepping Up planning process. A criminal justice coordinator can fill this role, if that position already exists. If not, the county can contract for these services, or the county planning team can designate someone to serve in this role—such as a staff member from the jail, behavioral health care provider, or community supervision agency—in addition to that person's regular duties. The person selected should have knowledge of the local criminal justice and behavioral health systems, have excellent facilitation and organizational skills, and demonstrate the ability to proactively drive the planning process to ensure progress.

This handbook is designed to complement the Reducing the Number of People with Mental Illnesses in Jail: Six Questions County Leaders Need to Ask (the Six Questions) framework as a step-by-step facilitation guide for project coordinators. For each of the framework's six questions, this handbook provides:

- A summary of the question and its related objectives for the planning teams;
- Facilitation tips to assist the project coordinator in managing the planning process; and
- Facilitation exercises designed to achieve objectives and establish an efficient process for capturing the work of the planning teams.

The Role of the Project Coordinator

Your role as the project coordinator is critical to the success of your county's Stepping Up efforts. It is the project coordinator who ensures that key leaders are engaged, manages meeting agendas and minutes, coordinates subcommittee work, provides research and data to guide the decision-making process, and continuously motivates the planning team.

This handbook is designed to help you manage your county's planning process. It will guide and systematize the flow of your work as you develop meeting agendas and decide how best to utilize members of the planning team. Other members of the planning team may benefit from having access to this handbook, especially those who are providing facilitation support, such as leading subcommittee work. You are not required to fill out or submit this handbook to the Stepping Up partners.

Additional complementary training materials are available through the Stepping Up Toolkit, including webinars, briefs that provide information and guidance for applying the Six Questions, and other resources.

Online County Self-Assessment

THE STEPPING UP INITIATIVE

Welcome

The Stepping Up County Self-Assessment is designed to assist counties participating in the Stepping Up initiative or other counties interested in evaluating the status of their current efforts to reduce the prevalence of people with mental illnesses in jails and in determining their needs for training and technical assistance to advance their work.

Series of Briefs

IN FOCUS IMPLEMENTING MENTAL HEALTH SCREENING AND ASSESSMENT

This brief focuses on implementing a mental health screening and assessment process, specifically to identify the number of people booked into jails who have serious mental illnesses (SMI). While implementing this process may also identify people who have less serious mental illnesses and other behavioral health needs who may require treatment while in jail, this brief is focused on identifying the people who have SMI because this population tends to represent the greatest draw on scarce behavioral health and social service resources.<sup>1</sup> Determining the prevalence of people who have SMI in jails will allow counties to develop or refine a strategic plan that will have the greatest impact on addressing this population's needs.

Stepping Up is a national initiative to reduce the number of people who have mental illnesses in jails. Counties that have joined Stepping Up are using the initiative's framework document, Reducing the Number of People with Mental Illnesses in Jail: Six Questions County Leaders Need to Ask (Six Questions), to guide them in creating collaborative partnerships in their jurisdictions, systematically identifying people who have mental illnesses in their jails, and using data to inform systems-level changes and strategic plans to track progress over time. This brief is one of a series of companion products designed to provide counties with further guidance on how to apply the Six Questions framework. For key resources related to Stepping Up, including case studies, webinars, and network calls, visit the Stepping Up Toolkit.

WHY IT'S IMPORTANT

To reduce the number of people who have SMI in jails, counties need to have a clear and accurate understanding of the size of the population that has SMI. Prior to being booked into jail, some people who have SMI may never have been diagnosed and may be unaware of their mental illness, while others may have been diagnosed with a mental illness and received but discontinued treatment. Screening and assessment are essential to identifying who should be connected or reconnected to services and treatment to address their behavioral health needs, which may also decrease the likelihood that they return to jail. Having this information will make counties better able to determine the treatment resources required to address this population's behavioral health needs. Moreover, having the ability to accurately and consistently identify the number of people who have SMI will help counties to track progress toward their goals.

WHY IT'S CHALLENGING

Implementing a screening and assessment process can be difficult, especially for counties that do not already have the staff, tools, and procedures in place to systematically conduct these activities. Jails are fast-paced environments; with many people being released in less than 48 hours, there is little time to complete screenings and assessments.

<sup>1</sup> This brief does not include detailed information about additional screenings and assessments for suicide, substance addiction, and criminogenic risk, which are also beneficial to complete at the time of booking into jail to best support people with other services they need. For additional information on targeting resources based on behavioral health needs and criminogenic risk factors, refer to Adults with Behavioral Health Needs Under Community Supervision: A Shared Framework for Reducing Recidivism and Promoting Recovery.
